James Looney Electrocuted While at Work Bençath a Car.

Despite High Voltage Passing Through His Body, Injured Man Lingers for Five Minutes in a Hospital—How the Accident Happened James Looney, an employe of the Washington Traction Company, was electrocuted at 2:55 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the plow pit at Thirty-sixth Street and Prospect Avenue, Georgetown. Fire hundred and fifty volts of electricity passed through the man's body, but in spite of the powerful voltage, Looney was able to call for assistance, and his death did not think that he was dead.

"Mr. Tavenerer sprang into the pit, 'said Mr. Goebel, 'and received a shock, it was then realized that Looney had not turned the switch. The plow pit extends under both tracks, and the man in charge of the work which shas to be done there in changing the system from the underground to the overhead does not have to wait for a car to move on before he can leave the pit, as there is an exit through the pit on the other track. It appeared to me that Looney had forgotten to turn the switch after making the connections, had ordered the car to go ahead, and had grasped the conduct, charged with electricity, in a moment of absent minded-iness.

Koss Passo, another eyewitness to the accident, who lives at 3H5 Prospect Avenue, made substantially the same statement given by Mr. Goebel. Both were positive that they had heard the signal given by the man in the pit, which informed the motorman that all connections were made, and that he could go ahead. Yincent Nottingham, 132 Thirty-sixth Street, also witnessed the accident.

The Coroner was notified and will hold an inquest at 11 o'clock this morning at the Sixth precinct police station.

While Lee was engaged, the boys quietly passed behind the counter, and young Bowman, it is said, helped himself to all the money in sight. Afterward the police were informed of the robbery, and the Bowman youth was arrested through a lookout sent out by the police.

After the robbery young Bowman went to Leesburg, Va., where the District National Guard was encamped last week. There he was recognized by a member of the local police force. He was held by the Virginia authorities until a detective could be sent for him.
